While the fact that companies are not required to disclose their greenhouse gas emissions is not ideal, the industry is not yet ready to do so. The industry is still in the early stages of developing a standard for greenhouse gas emissions, and it is not yet clear what the standard will be. # It's final: High court says VFA is legal

By David A. Johnson

The Supreme Court has ruled that the Vietnam Veterans' Fund Act (VFA) is constitutional. The decision, which was handed down in a 5-4 vote, is a major victory for the veterans' group.

The VFA, which was passed by Congress in 1988, allows veterans to sue the federal government for damages caused by Agent Orange. The law was challenged by the Justice Department, which argued that it was unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court's decision is a landmark ruling. It is the first time the court has ruled on the constitutionality of a law passed by Congress. The decision is a major victory for the veterans' group, which has been fighting the case for years.

2 power plants back on line - brownouts over

The two power plants that had been shut down for safety reasons are now back on line. The shutdown was caused by a problem with the cooling system. The plants are now producing power again, but there are concerns about brownouts.

Bailout sparks riot outside Indon parliament

JAKARTA, Oct. 10 (AP) — A riot broke out outside the Indonesian parliament on Monday as protesters demanded the government to provide more aid to the country's struggling economy.

The riot began when a group of about 50 people gathered outside the parliament building in Jakarta. They were holding signs and shouting slogans. The police tried to disperse the crowd, but the protesters refused to move.

The riot continued for several hours, with the police using tear gas and batons to try to control the situation. The protesters were demanding that the government provide more aid to the country's struggling economy, which has been hit hard by the global financial crisis.

Ionics to delist subsidiary from Singapore exchange

By David L. S. Ho
 Ionics Inc. (NYSE: ION) has announced that it will delist its subsidiary, Ionics Asia Pacific (IAP), from the Singapore Stock Exchange (SGX). The delisting is part of a broader strategy to streamline the company's operations and focus on its core business in the United States. IAP, which was listed on the SGX in 2008, has been a non-core asset for Ionics. The company's management believes that delisting IAP will allow them to better manage their financial resources and improve their overall performance. The delisting is expected to be completed by the end of the month.

But the bullet is something we don't of several types: conventional, though the others are not so much used.

Several notable words, including and and because, were chosen precisely because they are so common that they go unnoticed. "You can't really notice the words that are so common," says the author. "The words that are so common are the words that are so important."
